THE WATER SURVEY

Another water shortage scare has given domestic consumers and manufacturers the jitters. The latter, especially, are concerned and they want to know what it is all about. They have a definite right to know, and as soon as possible.

The people of Salem are beginning to be skeptical about these water shortages. They cannot understand why the supply should suddenly become so short or the consumption so unusually heavy. They cannot understand why the level of the reserve supply should drop sharply in a single day.

If there is a water shortage, the first question to be answered is where the supply is going. Consumption has not increased almost overnight to a degree that should deplete reserve supplies. If the water actually is being pumped, are there some big leaks, or just where is the water going?

With this state of confusion in the water department, it is important, even vital, that the survey of the entire water situation by an outside engineer be started immediately. That survey has been authorized by city council, which has appropriated the money for the purpose. The action was taken about two weeks ago, but the contract has not been returned to the engineer. This should be done at once, with the urgent request that he start his survey without further delay.

SALEM'S TRAFFIC PROBLEM

Traffic lights on E. State st. were not operating Sunday and officers were stationed at the intersections of Ellsworth, Broadway, Lundy and Lincoln avenues, directing the heavy holiday flow of motor traffic through Salem's bottleneck. The result was a speeding up of this traffic, providing a steadier flow through the congested section of the city.

Even with this aid—and it is suggested that the plan be followed every Sunday throughout the summer—the congestion of traffic was not eliminated. Salem's downtown business district is a bottleneck for traffic flowing into the city from state and federal routes from every direction. It is recognized by state highway officials as the worst traffic bottleneck in the state. Not only does it cause confusion in the city, but it impedes the flow of through traffic and thus contributes to accidents on the highways leading into the city.

For several years the condition has been growing worse and occasionally it has been the subject of attention on the part of city council. Although methods of relieving the condition have been discussed at various times, no one has come forth with a plausible solution and, instead of following through in an effort to find a practical plan, each time the subject has been dropped as though it were hopeless.

Diverting through traffic to ease the congestion on State street may sound like a simple plan until thought is given to the narrow side streets and the problem that would be created by directing traffic over them. What is needed is a continuing study of the problem from an engineering standpoint. Recommendations as the result of such a study might involve rather large expenditures of public money, but it would be money wisely spent and no one could object to it. The problem is probably too big for council to tackle without some help. It could get that help from a citizens committee by the mere asking.

DEFENSE SAVINGS BONDS

History records that wars have been financed by inflation. In the past all major wars have been accompanied by credit expansion and by rising prices and wages, very unevenly distributed. The inflation has impeded the war effort and made it more costly, and it has been followed in every case by great and costly depressions. To avoid a repetition of this process in the present defense effort, the government is offering Defense Savings bonds and banks throughout the country are encouraging their purchase.

Diverting buying power from the people into the hands of the government through taxation is one way of combatting inflation. A second way is to persuade people to save, and to lend their savings to the government. When they do this the financing causes no inflationary increase in buying power. If they do not do this, the government will have to sell its securities to the banks. The result would be an expansion in bank credit and in buying power which would be inflationary.

Not only do public subscriptions to the savings bonds combat inflation during the boom period, but they provide reserves of buying power which cushion the readjustment afterward. If people whose incomes are now increased will set a considerable part of the increase aside for the rainy day, they will benefit doubly.

CRETE, LATEST BUT NOT LEAST

Great Britain's loss in Crete is a kind of collective disaster. More than a strategically situated island has been surrendered to the Axis.

The British have lost what in some ways must have been a German test of invasion tactics for use against the United Kingdom. They have been unable to keep the enemy from proving that it is possible to use parachute troops to accomplish the defeat of a besieged island.

While it may be argued this was made possible by British inferiority in the air, it will be difficult for Britons to keep from wondering whether their own island's defense will be relatively strong enough to stand up against what would be an infinitely stronger attack.

Impact on British morale is further increased by the extent of the naval loss, only partly discounted by the success against the German battleship Bismarck—a success that objectively resembles a Pyrrhic victory because it was made possible in large part by loss of the Hood, largest unit of the British fleet. It is startlingly evident that British naval power is wily.

nerable to air attack, particularly when it must be exercised in narrow waters.

One more effect of the battle of Crete that must be given proper weight is a further loss of prestige. The inclination to refrain from cooperation with Germany inevitably is affected by evidence that Germany is in a constantly better position to enforce cooperation on its own terms. Loss of power in the eastern Mediterranean, serious as it is from the standpoint of Britain's lifeline vs. Suez, may be even more serious from the standpoint of repercussions in other parts of the world where British ability to withstand attack is being questioned.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, June 3

A DAY notable for the renewed life and activity in old crystallized or static conditions, which may respond to new techniques, modernized methods or just plain push and hard work. Elders and superiors as well as long-established institutions may cooperate in such a fresh start, or assist in relation to stagnant investments or securities. But there is need of sagacity, astuteness, as well as suspicion, as both business and private affairs are in danger from intrigue, snares and treachery.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of definite progress in resurrecting old static and congested conditions by infusing new methods, sound systems, keen insight as to details, with dogged determination and industry as well as by the sturdy help of old institutions, employers or elders. However, in all associations there should be a suspicious eye toward intrigues, trickery or duplicity. Under the beneficent sway there should be enhanced values in property and solid investments. Fidelity and merit should attain proper rewards.

A child born on this day should be persistent, steady, responsible and hard working, with sound views and system. It may however suffer fraud or deception from sources least suspected.

Some of the true stories are really the funniest. A speaker, discoursing on the transitory nature of earthly things, said: "Look now at the great cities of antiquity. Where are they? Why, some of them have perished so completely it is probable they never existed."

If there is anything in the power of suggestion, Goering, the fat man with many medals, can also fly.

WE STILL KNOCK ON WOOD

Many Ancient Superstitions Still Exist

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

My friend, Mr. A. Monroe Aurd, Jr., of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, has spent a lifetime collecting the folk lore and folk history of the Pennsylvania Dutch. It is a unique contribution to Americana and I wish every community in our country had an Aurd to record the native sayings and habits of the countryside; they are rapidly becoming a part of the past. You may remember they had a witch or "hex" trial for murder in Pennsylvania not long ago.

Dr. Clendingen will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Mr. Aurd's latest compilation is Popular Home Remedies of the Pennsylvania Germans. Here are some of the quaint beliefs from long ago about how to treat common illnesses. What is a superstition? "Something the other fellow believes" is a safe answer. "An ignorant or irrational fear" says the dictionary. But don't forget, some superstitions have turned into sound science—like the belief of the milk maids of Gloucestershire who thought, to every scientific man's amazement in the 18th century, that sealing their milk pails would prevent the milk from souring. "A superstition, as its name implies, is something that has been left to stand over like unfinished business from one session of the world's witenagemot to the next," wrote James Russell Lowell.

Interesting Superstitions Here are some items from Mr. Aurd's collection of superstition: To tickle a child before it is a year old may cause it to stammer. Remove freckles by washing them with the water of baptism, or with the water collected from tombstones. If it rains on you while there is a rainbow, you will get freckles. Wash freckles with dew on the first of May. If you would prevent headache, or toothache, you must form the habit of putting on your right stocking first, your right shoe, etc.

For hiccoughs sit down with a glass of water by your side; let someone put a little water in each ear with the little finger of each hand, keeping the fingers there until you have drunk all the water.

If you would like your moustache to grow, put sweet milk or cream on your lip and let the cat lick it off. Sap of grapevines may do the same thing.

In modern times, for nosebleed, one can chew newspaper.

For rheumatism wear the eyetooth of a pig; or carry three potatoes; or put a copper cent in your shoe; wear a ring made from a horseshoe nail. Put glass knobs under the bed posts. Tie a dried eelskin around your joints. Carry a coffin nail. A salt mackerel tied on the feet. Carry a horseshoe tied on the feet.

Do not pay the doctor, at least in full, if you would avoid sickness in the family.

To stop sneezing look at the tip of your nose with both eyes; or press your index finger hard below your nose.

If you don't want any visitors, don't let the dog roll on the floor.

If teeth are picked by a splint of wood from a tree which was struck by lightning, the toothache will cease but the teeth will decay.

Always wash a new shirt before wearing; for if you are taken sick in an unwashed one, you will never get well.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. H. Z.: "Does continuous gum-chewing do any harm? I mean day after day, hour after hour. Is the removing of moles entirely safe for all people?"

Answer: I do not believe that continuous gum-chewing such as you describe does any harm, but it makes me tired to hear about it, the way you describe it. There is no danger in the removal of moles, with one exception. The single blue-colored or black mole (melanoma) should be removed by a surgeon.

with a wide incision. Burning or cauterizing or applying acid or electricity to such moles is dangerous because they are potential malignant tumors and the irritation simply stirs them up.

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

Sandra turned for a last quick look at the approaching ship, and a jump leaped into her throat. It was the Glory of the West, regal, breath-taking, worthy of the name she bore! She was coming swiftly, her sails radiant with sunlight, her cut-water slicing the green seas into fountains of spray that rained around her prow.

The ship was still too far off for Sandra to see the golden figurehead, but she knew the outflung hand of the laughing mermaid was pointing toward her. And on the Glory's deck men with strong glasses trained on the Dragon were anxiously searching for some sign, some news, of her. As she closed the port, she sent up a silent prayer that the watchers might soon be reading that news from Kemp's semaphoring arms.

She was slipping off her sandals and slacks in preparation for swimming when it occurred to her that Kemp, in his note of instructions, had said nothing about making his own escape from the Dragon. But that thought was wiped from her mind by a faint creaking of the roof above her head. Kemp! Up there now, ready to attempt his signaling. If only Ikeda would remain a few minutes longer!

She stood still, tense, listening. Kemp's waving arms must now be spelling out their fate. In just a little while they two would be swimming together toward safety. Swimming . . . a pang of fear went through her as she thought of the tumultuous sea through which she must fight her way. But Kemp would be at her side, Kemp would—

A cough sounded in the next room Ikeda! He was moving . . . he was out of his bed! Any moment he would step out on deck and see Kemp signaling from the top of the cabin. Dare she risk calling a warning to Kemp? Should she rap against her ceiling?

Before she could do anything, she heard Ikeda step out of his door. Weak with dread, she waited for the sharp words that would announce Kemp's unmasking. But instead, she heard his quiet, casual greeting from the top of the cabin. "Morning, Ikeda. Quite a picture—that old salmon ship, eh?"

Ikeda answered in the middle of a yawn. "What ship is it?"

"I can't make out her name, but she looks like an Alaska Packers cannery ship. We're right in the lane of their windjammers bound for Bristol Bay, you know."

Sandra missed Ikeda's reply, because she was startled by a muffled thump against the outer wall of her stateroom. She peered through a crack between the curtains and saw Kemp's dangling legs. He was sitting on the roof, his canvas-shod heels gently swinging against her wall. Was it a warning? Or merely spicing for her attention?

Before she could decide, he lowered himself to the deck directly outside the port. He stood there, his back to her, and slowly raised his glasses, training them on the Glory.

That was her cue to go to the lazaret! But did he mean it—with Ikeda on deck?

As if in answer, Kemp said clearly, "It is time—" He broke off, lowered his glasses, then deliberately raised them again. "It is time," he repeated, "for that fool on the windjammer to take in some sail, if he doesn't want to lose a mast."

It is time . . . Sandra was about to start for the trap door when Ikeda's voice stopped her. "Let me take the glasses a moment, Lieutenant."

She waited, weak with apprehension. Through the glasses Ikeda would read the name on the Glory. Then—

"Here you are, Commander. Oh—sorry!" Something thumped on the deck. "Clumsy of me. Wait till I wipe them."

"Never mind. I want my coffee now. I'll relieve you of the watch as soon as I've had it—and ordered Miss O'Moore's breakfast. No doubt she will be surprised when I bring her tray in myself. There was something sly and batting in the man's tones."

Without waiting to her mother, Sandra let herself through the trap door and crawled back to the lazaret.

The hatch cover was lifted a few inches, as before; but it was some minutes before Kemp came aft and squatted beside the combing. Under cover of lighting a cigarette, he whispered, "Ikeda's in the galley ordering breakfast. Are you ready?"

"Don't be afraid, darling. Reynall will pick you up quickly. Now hand me the gun."

Sandra gasped. "Oh, I left it on my bunk. I'll go back—"

"No, no. There isn't time."

"But—it leaves you with no weapon!"

"It doesn't matter—now. When I slip off the hatch cover, you must—Shh!" He broke off and leaped to his feet. "Hi, Ikeda!" There was a note of mockery in his voice. "Having trouble?"

Ikeda—on deck again! He was saying something she could not distinguish the words, but it brought a laugh from Kemp, who called out, "Evidently the lady has her own ideas about when she wants breakfast."

Ikeda's response was a sharp command in Japanese.

Kemp moved farther toward the stern. Sandra could see him standing erect on the grating, facing southward toward the Glory. He yawned, stretched prodigiously, holding his arms straight out from his sides. Then, abruptly, dropped them.

A moment longer he stood there, a lounging debonaire figure in white shirt and slacks. Only a faint twitching of the hard ridge of muscle under his jaw betrayed the strain he was under.

He was turning toward her again, when there came a sudden crashing sound of splintering wood. Then another, and another. Ikeda! He was smashing in the door of her stateroom with an ax.

Aboard the Glory, Captain O'Moore had his glasses leveled on the Dragon, when Kemp climbed to the top of the cabin to signal "Starbuck, by jeezaw!" he exclaimed. "No one else on deck. But of course they're not expecting pursuit, and certainly not from a windjammer. 'He's semaphoring.' Reynall has—" tly wiped his own glasses and raised them against his eyes.

"Read aloud, Jean, I'll set it down." The Forest Man had out pad and pencil.

"Missed the first of it. But now—"

Tonetheless he repeated:—

Swimming . . . only . . . chance . . . for . . . period . . . arms . . . spread . . . you . . . you . . . ship . . . instantly . . . that . . . position . . . pick . . . up . . . swimmer . . .

O'Moore burst out: "Sandra! Overboard in a sea like this? The man's crazy."

Reynall's voice was droning on:—"If . . . understood . . . run . . . en-sign . . . mizzen . . . truck . . . and . . . dip . . . once . . ."

"That's all," Reynall thrust the telescope into the hands of the Forest Man and started off. "We haven't a flag aboard. I'll have to get a blanket to hoist—"

"Wait!" called Miss Jacqueline, already on her way to the after cabin.

Almost at once she came out, carrying across her forearms a faded United States ensign, folded so that a great hole showed in the blue field. She brushed past Reynall and held the flag out to O'Moore.

"You never hauled this down, Danny," she said. "I think you should be the one to hoist it now."

"Me old flag, with the very hole Ramps Reynall shot into it from his high-ranging four-pounder!" He stood blinking, making no move to take the flag.

"Snap out of it, man!" cried Jacqueline. "Do you think I'd pack this flag around for fifty years, and not see Dan O'Moore raise it? Step lively!" She thrust the ensign into his hands, and strode back to the after cabin.

O'Moore, with fingers strangely clumsy, bent the ensign to the masthead. As the wind whipped it free, he dipped it once and left it there, fluttering against the bright morning sky.

"Starbuck sees it!" The Forest Man was squinting through the long telescope. "He's damn! There's Ikeda. He and Starbuck are talking now about us, I imagine. But Ikeda doesn't seem excited. He hasn't recognized the Glory, yet." The Forest Man chuckled. "Smart as he is, he'd hardly expect to be chased by a floating cannery! . . . Now he's going into the galley."

"And Starbuck? queried Reynall. "Just standing easy like beside the deckhouse, training his glasses on us."

"Well, there's nothing for us to do but hold this course until we get his signal to turn," said Reynall. "I'll get the whaleboat swung out for instant launching. Captain O'Moore, you handle the ship, I'll take charge of the whaleboat."

"I'll go with you, Jean." The Forest Man handed the telescope over to O'Moore.

O'Moore mounted to the poop with Mayes following. The intelligence officer had scarcely taken his Navy glasses off the Dragon for an instant since coming on deck. The distance between the two vessels had narrowed now until even the binoculars brought out details with clarity.

Mayes spoke suddenly: "Kemp's moving aft now to the stern. Better take a look, O'Moore. That telescope's better than these glasses."

"That devil Ikeda's comin' out of the galley now, tailed by a messboy with a tray," Dynamite reported.

"He's stopped before a stateroom door to fit a key into the lock. Believe, 'tis the very door the scoundrel has locked on me gurl! . . . Now Starbuck is standin' on the stern gratin', his arms falded. But he's lookin' our way . . . There he goes—openin' his arms wide. Our signal to change course!"

He called to Shandy at the wheel, "Take a bearin' on the Dragon! Lay the Glory's head on that position." Then his voice boomed out along the deck. "Stand by, port braces! Heave in lively, ads!"

As the ship swung, Mayes cried:

out, "What the devil! Ikeda's using an ax on that door, Captain."

O'Moore brought the telescope to bear on the Dragon. But what he saw was not Ikeda swinging the ax, but Starbuck in the act of flinging off the lazaret hatch cover. Starbuck, reaching both hands down to the hatch and swinging to the deck a slim, white figure that dived instantly off the Dragon's stern into the heaving, foam-flecked sea.

"Sondy!" hoarsely cried the Captain. With trembling hands he swept the old telescope over the leaping green hills of water until, in the circle, Sandra's wet red head broke through the crest of a wave.

"Steady!" snapped O'Moore to Shady. "Hold her right there, Lane Blessed Mother let us get to me gurl before that heathen has time to stop and circle back."

"The Dragon's plowing straight ahead on its course," commented Mayes. "I wonder if Ikeda . . . Oh, my God!" His strangled cry was between a prayer and a groan. "Ikeda! 'He's trying to shoot the girl in the water!'"

Seen through the glasses, Ikeda stood just aft of the deckhouse, facing toward the Dragon's stern and the swimming girl. Half-crouched, he was leaning far to one side, trying to aim a heavy automatic past some obstacle in his line of fire.

That obstacle was Kemp Starbuck. Kemp—stepping this way and that, to squarely interpose his body between Ikeda and the girl in the water. But suddenly Ikeda straightened angrily, and leveled his gun at Kemp.

Theatre Attractions

Barbara Stanwyck and Gary Cooper co-starred in "Meet John Doe" at the State theater tonight and Tuesday.

Marked by superlative performances, masterly direction of Frank Capra and general fine production, "Meet John Doe," showing at the State theater tonight and Tuesday, makes Gary Cooper a contender for an academy award again this year. Capra's hand is evident in the entire film, his genius for making the homely, the simple, the genuine a matter of national importance and interest the guiding factor in picture.

Cooper, who starred in Capra's "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," creates Robert Riskin's "John Doe" as everyman. John Doe is the man who reaches into the return slot of a pay telephone, hoping to grab the nickel someone forgot; he is also the guy who will give his last dime to a beggar on the street. He is the guy who will do anything within the law to beat a fellow man on a business deal and when he has succeeded will take the guy out and spend twice as much as he made.

Barbara Stanwyck, playing opposite Cooper, has a role which marks the high spot in her acting career. Walter Brennan as John Doe's partner, Richard Roe, makes screen performance history. Consistently good work is done also by Spring Byington, Gene Lockhart, James Gleason, Edward Arnold and Regis Toomey.

Because of the unusual nature and conclusion of the plot, publicity on the picture has omitted the story details and audiences will see an unannounced drama brought to the screen.

POPE'S MESSAGE STRESSES RIGHTS

Cites Fundamental Values Which Should Follow "New Order"

(By Associated Press)

VATICAN CITY, June 2.—Pope Pius XII, outlining his views on how the "fundamental values" of social and economic life should share in "that new order which the world expects and hopes" will emerge from the war, emphasizes safeguarding of the rights of the individual.

In a Sunday radio broadcast commemorating the 50th anniversary of Pope Leo XIII's social encyclical, "Rerum Novarum," the pontiff said he wished to give "some further directive moral principles" on the three fundamental values: the use of material goods, labor and the family.

Hits Too Much Interference

He cautioned against too extensive state interference in the rights and duties of individuals and families and upheld man's right to freedom in his "physical, spiritual, religious and moral movements."

On the use of material goods, the holy father said:

"Undoubtedly the natural order deriving from God demands private property and the free reciprocal commerce of goods by interchange and gift as well as the functioning of the state as a control over both these institutions.

"To safeguard the inviolable sphere of the rights of the human person and to facilitate the fulfillment of his duties should be the essential office of every public authority."

"The duty and the right to organize the labor of the people belongs above all, to the people immediately interested: The employers and the workers."

Urges Safeguards

"Every legitimate and beneficial interference of the state in the field of labor should be such as to safeguard and protect its personal character both in the broad outlines and as far as possible in what concerns its execution; and this will happen if the norms of the state do not abolish or render impossible the exercise of other rights and duties equally personal."

On the family:

"A so-called civil progress would be unnatural which—either through the excessive burdens imposed or through exaggerated direct interference—were to render private property void of significance, practically taking from the family and its head the freedom, to follow the scope set by God for the perfection of family life."

Fireman Injured by Acid

of Eden" oil kingdom brought a week-end armistice.

Oil Still Off

The British said the pipe-line flow from Iraq's Mosul oil fields to the British base at Haifa, Palestine, was still cut off, and it was indicated that German forces remained in the country.

The whereabouts of 6-year-old King Feisal II remained uncertain. First reports said he was carried off to neighboring Iran (Persia) by the fleeing Rashid Ali; later it was said he was safe in Baghdad.

With the fall of Crete, the British predicted that Hitler would attempt next to invade Britain's Island stronghold of Cyprus in the eastern Mediterranean, 60 miles off the coast of French-ruled Syria.

British military experts also declared Hitler probably would exert heavy pressure on Turkey either to join the Axis or to permit the passage of Nazi armored divisions into the Middle East for an attack on Iraq and the Suez canal.

In an apparent attempt to soften the blow of Crete's fall, the London air ministry news service released an account of the RAF's counter-offensive against Germany, declaring:

"The German people are having the war brought home to them in Hamburg, Kiel and Wilhelmshaven. There is no concealing the latest damage and from these centers of devastation rumors run their course throughout Germany. Reports from within Germany describe Hamburg as a tragic picture. There is scarcely any district in the city—the second largest in Germany—which has not suffered."

Eire Protests

Meanwhile, the neutral Eire government protested to Berlin and demanded reparations for Saturday's bombing assault on Dublin, the capital, in which the toll included 30 known dead and 31 others probably killed. An official announcement said the bombs were "of German origin."

Survivors of the lost battle for Crete reached Egypt with the declaration that it was not Nazi paratroopers that beat them but the clear-cut German control of the air over the island.

"The paratroopers were nothing, one soldier declared, "but divebombers all day long and continual machine-gun fire were terrible."

A high RAF spokesman declared, however, that German air supremacy which carried the Nazis through the Balkans and to Crete ended at that Mediterranean island because of the air base factor.

Pope Pius XII, marking the 50th anniversary of Pope Leo XIII's famous social encyclical, "rerum novarum," enunciated principles on the fundamentals of life which he said should share in "that new order which the world expects and hopes" would emerge from the war.

Emphasizing the need for safeguarding the rights of individuals the holy father in his world-wide broadcast cautioned against too extensive state interference in the rights of individuals and families and upheld man's right to freedom in his "physical, spiritual, religious and moral movements."

FURS STORED AT PARIS CLEANERS

Salem Women Are Quick To Take Advantage of Modern Vault

With warm weather apparently here to stay and the fur coat season definitely out, many Salem women are finding the usual problem of how best to take care of the fur absolutely no problem at all this year.

The problem has been taken care of amply by the Paris Cleaners in the construction of a huge storage vault at their remodeled plant on the Benton rd.

The fur storage vault is one of the finest in the midwest, according to authorities in the cleaning and merchandising professions. Every safeguard has been provided against moths, mildew and drying out.

Science has solved the problem of preserving furs. If we were to undertake the job individually, the cost certainly would be far more than the garment is worth. At the Paris Cleaners, however, you can be certain of complete protection at very slight cost.

Give the Paris a ring. They'll be glad to tell you all about it.

Ice Refrigeration Solves Problems In Keeping Food

The keeping of meat, vegetables and other perishables is a problem food merchants have studied for years, but it has remained for the ice refrigerator manufacturers to perfect their units even beyond expectations.

The units pictured above are at the Famous Market on E. State st. Installed about a year ago, they have proven to the management that they do keep perishables in a fresh condition, and without the objections of transferring food odors or taste.

They are completely air-conditioned, that is, air circulated four or five times each minute, and the melted ice water carries away all odor. These principles in modern ice refrigeration have proven eminently satisfactory.

To close meats, vegetables and other perishables in any sort of refrigerator without air circulation and some means of draining out the odors is certain to create a condition of mixed flavors, and that is why, with some refrigeration, it is necessary to cover each individual dish.

With modern ice refrigeration this is not necessary, for the humidity is always right and the melting ice absorbs the odors. In fact, ice water will absorb much more than when water is warm. From an economical standpoint ice refrigeration for the home or market is an interesting study. It certainly costs much less to install in the first place; there is nothing mechanical to get out of order, and records, the Citizens Ice and Coal company can show you, indicate the servicing is most economical.

SCOPE OF MARKET HAS BEEN WIDENED

Many Trading In On New Models In Order To "Get Under Wire"

An active, well-stocked used car market these days is making possession of an automobile easier now than it has been for years, whether the purchaser seeks comfort and pleasure, or merely transportation.

There seems to be no secret to the fact that automobile production in the coming year or so will be curtailed to some extent because of national defense work and priorities.

Consequently, automobile owners or those who are contemplating owning cars, are hurrying along their buying in order to get under the wire. As a result, many fine used automobiles, a year or two old, perhaps, but still in excellent condition, have been placed on the market.

The E. L. Grate Motor Co., local Ford and Mercury dealer, has an unusually brilliant array of cars in this particular field. Demands have been heavy on new Ford and Mercury models and so the Salem firm has acquired many desirable models in traded-in cars.

Naturally, the Grate service department checks every used car carefully, so that it will go out in tip-top condition, although in many instances, they have found there is not a great deal to do on some traded-in autos which have been well-kept and well cared for.

How long the used car market will flourish is hard to determine, they say, but they suggest that if you're considering a purchase in this field, it would be best to act quickly.

How to become A SKILLED DRIVER

By RAY W. SHERMAN

FORD GOOD DRIVERS LEAGUE

HOLDING THE WHEEL

Your left hand should be above the center and your right hand just below the center, or in other words, like the position of the hands on a clock at 10-20. This position gives you the best control—it enables you to put your arms, shoulders and all your strength into steering if you have to.

A hand at the bottom of the wheel has no power. Try it and see! With today's good roads, many drivers forget the importance of gripping the wheel correctly and let their hands sort of lie in their laps while the cars roll. But it's a dangerous habit. A tire can blow. In that case you've got to fight the wheel, whereas if you were in the right position, all you'd need to do would be to tighten your grip and ride it out.

Indians Drop Double Header To Yankees, 2-0, 5-3; Lose Ground

WHITE SOX LEAD LEAGUE; TRIBE'S BOUDREAU HURT

Shortstop Out for Several Days After Twisting Knee In 2nd Game

(By Associated Press) CLEVELAND, June 2.—Woe is Cleveland!

With their pitchers and batters in a slump, the once-proud Indians today rested in second place as a result of dropping a second consecutive doubleheader.

To add to the humiliation, the usually-wobbly New York pitching staff gave the Redskins only three runs in administering the double dose, 2 to 0 and 5 to 3.

These facts were enough to sadden 32,081 fans as they filed out of Cleveland stadium yesterday, but today the followers received more bad news. Lou Boudreau, the team's sparkling shortstop, twisted his knee sliding in the second game and may be out of action for several days. He finished the contest, but his leg began swelling in the clubhouse.

The only cloud with a silver lining bore the image of Bob Feller, the blazin' ball who goes after his 11th victory of the year in the finale of the Yankee series. The New Yorkers, now pressing Cleveland for second and only a game and a half behind the pace-setting White Sox, summoned Marius Russo to the mound.

Here's the brief story of the two setbacks that pushed the Indians off the top spot for the first time in more than a month.

First Game

Red Ruffing limited Cleveland to eight well-scattered singles and didn't issue a pass in registering a shutout. Al Milnar gave up seven hits and walked five in eight innings, with Joe Heving pitching a hitless ninth. It was the big south-paw's fifth defeat against six decisions.

Second Game

New York battered Mel Harder for four runs in the eighth inning to hand him his second setback of the year compared to four triumphs, Sing's by Crosetti and Red Rolfe and home runs by Johnny Sturm and George Selkirk did the business. The Yanks had scored a run in the fifth on a walk to Tommy Heinrich and Joe Gordon's double. Ken Keltner smashed a home run in the first and for the next seven innings Lefty Gomez gave Cleveland only three hits.

'WATCH OUR SMOKE' SAYS REDS' PILOT

McKeechne Promises Big Things As Pitchers Hit Stride

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, June 2.—The word from Manager Will McKeechne of the world champion Cincinnati Reds today is "Watch our smoke."

This word followed yesterday's split with the Giants and preceded today's efforts to get a winning streak going.

"This is the Deacon's reasoning: 'Monte Pearson and Gene Thompson showed me plenty. Monte's only mistake was a fat pitch to Mel Ott. Gene also looked good for the first time this season.'"

The sum and substance of it is that Monte, the ex-Yankee who hasn't seemed to know what the National League was all about, apparently found out even though he lost the opener yesterday, 3 to 2. Also that Gene, sophomore star of 1940 who was counted on for 20 victories this year, had his troubles but also had the courage to pitch through them and come out with his first win in the nightcap. The score was the same the other way around.

Hold Giants to Seven

Monte and Whitey Moore, his relief, held the Giants to seven hits and the decisive blow was Ott's 400th homer of his major league career. Pearson blew the Giants down time and again in tight spots, but he couldn't win a game with only two runs.

The Reds gave Thompson one more, and that was enough, although the Giants had him in the hole on several occasions. Lonnie Frey's fourth homer of the year was the punch that counted.

Prince Hal Schumacher of the Giants made the first game noteworthy by stopping rookie Chuck Allen's hitting streak at 17 straight games. The young third baseman, however, knocked out a single in the nightcap to get going again.

CHICAGO NEEDS BETTER FIELDING TO STAY ON TOP

Must Plug Leak In Infield To Maintain Narrow Lead Over Tribe

By SID FEDER Associated Press Sports Writer

Miss Secretary, when you finish figuring out how the top of both the week-end, please take a big league got so scrambled durt-letter to Mr. James Joseph Dykes, care of the Chicago White Sox, first place, American baseball league:

"Dear Jimmy: We see by the papers you're right up there at the head of the parade today. Nice going, Pal. But you better give those old legs of yours a shot in the arm and come back to work. That is, if you want that American league pennant, you'd better come off that retired list and try to put a cork in your infield."

Split With Senators

"You split with the Senators yesterday, blowing the first, 3-2, and taking the nightcap, 4-3, in 11 innings. Except for some extra-special stuff by those fancy darts in your infield, you might have won both ends to really take a toe-hold on first place, instead of barely getting a grip on a one-percentage-point edge."

"Now, Jimmy, it doesn't look like the Indians, who got kicked around twice yesterday by the Yankees, are much interested in that pennant any more."

Why even your old boss, Connie Mack, has his Athletics so hopped up they've won 13 out of 16, including two from the befuddled Browns yesterday, and are leading the second division. You know that rarefied air isn't good for them. So it looks like anybody's 'bingo' in your league this year, and you can do it as well as the next guy."

Dodgers Nip Cardinals

Having disposed of that business, we can turn our undivided attention to the celebration over on the banks of the Gowanus in Brooklyn. The Dodgers nipped the collapsing Cardinals, 3-2, yesterday to climb into a first place tie with St. Louis in the National league.

The Boston Red Sox moved into fourth place and dropped Detroit all the way to sixth by trouncing the Tigers twice, Jimmy Fox's two-run homer went a long way toward winning the opener, 7-6. A run in the ninth decided the free-for-all nightcap, 6-5. The amazing Athletics turned in 5-2 and 5-3 victories over the Browns behind steady hurling by Bump Hadley and Phil Marchildon.

Mel Ott Hits 400th Homer

The 400th homer of Mel Ott's 17-year career led the New York Giants to a 3-2 win over the Cincinnati Reds in the last game of their double bill, but Junior Thompson's eight-hit flinging gave the Rhinelanders the after-piece by an identical score.

The Chicago Cubs bombarded the Phillies, 9-5 in their opener, and then took the nightcap, 1-0, as Jake Mooty won out over Lefty Lee Grissom in a heart-breaker pitching duel. This boosted the Cubs into fourth place over the Reds. The Pirates and Braves were rained out.

Three Salem Golfers Win at Sleepy Hollow

Three Salem golfers won prizes in events over the holidays at the Sleepy Hollow course near Alliance. Mrs. Vincent Judge poked out a 226-yard drive to win the honors in the women's event. Mat Engeler won the bogey prize with a 47-48-56 and a handicap of 20, giving him a net 76. The prize in the approach event went to Jim Craig, who chipped onto the green about two inches from the cup.

People and Things

Douglas G. Hertz, owner of the New York football Yankees, has gone to College Station, Texas, to see Johnny Kimbrough graduate. The Chicago Defender, the big Negro weekly, is conducting a survey on whether Joe Louis should retire. The boys who know the Colonial course at Fort Worth will bet 280 will be broken in the National Open. Present record is 281—Guldahl at Denver in 1938. SENTIMENT HIGH FOR 'STAGGERED' HUNTING SEASON

Poll Shows Trend for Return of Experiment Tried in 1939

COLUMBUS, O., June 2.—Mounting sentiment for restoration of the "staggered" hunting season was indicated today in initial returns on questionnaires distributed to some 25,000 Ohio sportsmen by the state conservation and natural resources division.

Central Ohio showed the greatest trend toward the experimental system under which, in 1939, pheasant season was extended to three weeks with shooting four days a week, rather than two six-day weeks.

The system was abandoned last year principally upon insistence of farmers in the northwestern Ohio pheasant territory, who contended that three weeks of shooting would be injurious to late crops.

Most replies indicated a strong desire for retention of present seasons and bag limits. The reports will be considered by the conservation and natural resources commission at a public hearing June 10, and the following day hunting seasons and bag limits for the year are to be fixed.

A squint at the questionnaires showed a wide range of sentiment regarding pheasants, rabbits and squirrels — principal objectives of most Ohio nimrods.

Some suggested that the pheasant season, limited last year to Nov. 15-30, inclusive, be extended to Nov. 15-Jan. 1, while others proposed that the former daily bag limit of two cock birds be boosted to two cocks and two hens daily.

Dozens suggested that there be no open season on squirrels, while others suggested that the daily bag limit be boosted from four to six. Rabbits, generally, fared most poorly. Scores of sportsmen advocated that they be placed on the open list all year 'round, while others recommended that no bag limit be put on the bunnies. Last year they were available four-a-day from Nov. 15, through Jan. 1.

Kenyon Tennis Champ

GAMBIER—Kenyon sophomore Ken Dalby is the new Ohio Conference tennis champion, and Bill McMurray and Carl Mitchell of Kenyon, the doubles titlists. They won the crowns as Kenyon retained its team title with 15 points to four for second-place Oberlin.

Six Goals By Pidgeon Lead Salem Polo Team To Second Victory Over Akron, 14-10

The Salem polo club pounded through to its second win of the season yesterday with a victory over the Akron Bar K Cowboys at Coy field, 14-10.

Showing far better team play than they did in their initial victory against the Akron team on Memorial day, the Salem riders held the lead in scoring throughout the fray. Pidgeon's agile stick work in close scrimmage, Votaw's back shots through the uprights, and the consistently better play of Willie Smith and Ray Moff paved the way for the Salem victory.

Pidgeon's six goals led the Salem team. Votaw was close behind with five while three by Smith completed the Salem scoring. Harvey Green was high man for Akron with four goals.

Pidgeon Scores Three

Pidgeon started the Salem scoring, walloping three foul shots through in the first chukker. A tally on a foul shot by Harvey Green gave Akron its first point in the game, while a score by Dick Knepper constituted the only point from scrimmage in the first chukker.

The Salem squad started the second chukker by intercepting a foul shot by Green and driving it the length of the field to score in one of the best exhibitions of team play this year. Stretched out in 1-2-3-4 position, the local mallet-wielders quickly stroked the ball down the turf.

The second chukker was loaded with high goal polo; long, clean shots by Smith, good "team sense" by all the Salem players, several difficult under-the-belly shots, including an exceptionally nice one by Tony Sheen; several well-aimed angle shots through the goal, and good interception of the throw-in. At the chukker's end the score was Salem 7, Akron 2.

Sir Hugh Walpole, Author, Dies, Asks No Mourning

LONDON, June 2.—Sir Hugh Walpole, author of a novel a year since he was 25, is dead at 57. He died of a heart attack early yesterday after a week of illness. An obituary notice said there would be "no mourning, by his request."

Up to his last illness Sir Hugh kept himself at the writing which he said came as naturally as breathing. His recent work consisted mostly of contributions to a London newspaper book review section. Sir Hugh's best-known works were the widely-read "Jeremy" books and the "Herries" saga. He was known in the United States, too, for his frequent lectures and visits.

"My supreme piece of luck," he said once, "was in being completely fascinated by the work I was doing. I adore writing. If you can be absorbed in something you're doing, find enough in it to live on, then I think you're inevitably a happy man."

WAR PRIORITIES EXTENDED BY FDR

Makes Possible Speeding Of Arms Production For Britain

Great Lakes during the 1941 transportation season.

The bill suspends for a year a law reserving coastwise trade to American ships. There are not enough American bottoms to carry all the ore to meet demands surpassing all previous records. Eighty-five per cent of the iron ore comes from the Lake Superior region, so Canadian ships will be employed as they were in the World war, to haul the ore between lake ports.

The bill just become law allowed the extension of mandatory priorities to contracts made by England, or any other foreign country brought under the lease-lend act.

Importance Is Factor
Orders of government agencies other than the army and navy and of private industry, when they are of vital importance to defense, also may be assigned mandatory priorities.

In addition, the legislation makes it clear that such priorities may be applied to sub-contracts and sub-orders that control may be exercised by the government over products and materials in which shortages appear by reason of the impact of the defense program and that these products and materials may be allocated to defense and to the most important civilian needs.

NATURAL CAUSES BLAMED FOR FIRE

(By Associated Press)

JERSEY CITY, N. J., June 2.—Blackened rubble and heat-twisted steelwork held the secret today of the cause of a 24-hour fire that ravaged eight blocks along the Jersey City waterfront, but the police, coast guard and Federal Bureau of Investigation expressed belief that it definitely was not sabotage.

Fire Chief Frank Ertle, who estimated the damage at $25,000,000, told newsmen to "put any sabotage ideas out of your mind," adding that the fire could have started from a carelessly-tossed cigarette.

The fire broke out Saturday afternoon in a stock yard and was not extinguished until after the flames had mushroomed spectacularly through the waterfront area between Sixth st. and Pavonia ave.

Several hundred head of cattle perished, and the fire destroyed an eight-story grain elevator and engine house, a two-story cattle pen and hay loft of the Jersey City Stock Yards company, a large milk platform, nine barges, 16 freight cars and two automobiles.

In addition, the fire caused extensive damage to a 400x200 foot warehouse, six ferry slips of the Erie railroad and a covered railroad spur.

The warehouse was bulging with crude rubber, oil, bales of paper, tool steel, alcohol, Scotch whisky and chemicals.

LONDON—Of the total of 319 names of men appointed in the Home Guard only 19 are plain "misters." The other 300 names appearing in the War Office order are those of peers, baronets, knights, M. P.'s and brigadier-generals.

to provide a maximum output while fluctuation at the third well was proof to the group that this oil is inadequate. The well was left at approximately 70 percent motor load.

The committee also found that the pipe lines leading from the Whinnery field are too small, causing a bottleneck, and the recommendation was that an eight inch line be installed immediately from the discharge "Y" of Whinnery wells Nos. 1 and 1A to the present east main.

Other Recommendations

Other recommendations were: "Make an immediate check on Zelle well No. 3 and if it is proven conclusively that this well is short on water, then move the pump to the west well in the Oana field (now an air lift well)."

"Make a definite test on Whinnery well No. 4 and either repair and put this pump in service or, if water shortage is found in this well, the pump should then be installed on one of the present air lift wells."

Other minor recommendations were made, including "the most sincere cooperation between all of the city employees concerned."

In conclusion the report, which was prepared for the group by J. V. Emery, plant engineer at the Mullins plant, said:

"We would say that while we can find many things that need correction and attention, it is certainly evident that if the electric deep well turbine pump had not been installed and we were depending on the old air line, this situation would be much worse than it is."
